Image Archive

Since the beginning of NIH's involvement in AIDS research, it became obvious that documentation of the research effort would have historical import. This image archive includes material from the collections of the many institutes and offices at NIH involved with AIDS research.

Most of the material was developed and produced under government auspices and is, therefore, in the public domain and no permission is required for its use. We have included a clearly indicated credit line for the exceptions, where organizations or private individuals have kindly granted a one-time use of their material for this Web site. Any images of AIDS study volunteers are provided with the permission of those individuals, who chose to contribute to the effort by giving the research volunteers a face.
